Let me start by saying this game was NOT what I expected at all. When I spoke to the devs at schell games back when this was dubbed 'superchem' I was under the impression that it was gonna be a sandbox open chem lab with every substance available for me to mix and experiment with to my hearts content. I was looking to blow things up and make dangerous mixes. But if that's what you're looking for, go get 'chemist' on your smartphone. However, this game still gets a recommendation from me because it's super informative. Teaches you how to properly read measurements. And explains the proper use of each piece of equipment and proper chemistry terms. I would love an open lab all chems on the table free play kind of update. But for 8 bucks it's cheap fun and informative. So for anyone interested in basic chemistry, this game is a win.. This game is some serious, serious fun.

As a participant in something like a TV game show about chemistry, your task is to do quite a few exercises teaching you basically how to use a lab (and about safety in one, don't forget your goggles!). Your job is mostly to find out chemicals and get a certain amount of them - but it's just incredibly funny, trying to determine whether or not you've reached your 38 ml in your flask, since that one chemical creates a meniscus and it's not that easy to see it properly. The only con for me is the game's length. It has only two "shows" and can be finished rather quickly. It doesn't really let you make experiments on your own, so if that's what you look for, you may be disappointed. Other than that, it's a terrific piece of VR game that I can recommend to everyone.. I bought this the day it came out and I am impressed by how polished the game is. Even pouring liquid is smooth. It looks fantastic as graphics come and quite fun. I hope they add more competitions as there are only 2 as of now, but you can replay and master the competitions all you want. I would highly recommend this game if you are interested in science and chemistry. 10/10
